American Big Game In Its Haunts; The Book of the Boone and Crockett Club (Illustrated) GEORGE BIRD GRINNELL, Theodore Roosevelt, Arthur Erwin Brown, Jas. H. Kidder
Contains photographs from this period as well as additional wildlife images.

The Boone and Crockett Club was founded in 1887 by Theodore Roosevelt and George Bird Grinnell with the aim of promoting hunting with a view to sportsmanship and conservation. The spirit of the club was in respect and admiration for America's wildlife and hunting by the "fair-chase" method. The club worked for expansion and protection of Yellowstone National Park, elimination of commercial market hunting, creation of the National Park and National Forest Services, National Wildlife Refuge system, wildlife reserves and a conservation and land ethic in general. This book, first published in 1904, is a collection of journals from members excursions, along with an account of its policy with regards to conservation and game management and protection. It tells of the state of wildlife numbers in the early twentieth century and describes the decline of some species. It includes the club constitution and articles of membership.
