Building Resilience of Coupled Human-Natural Systems of Pastoralism in the Developing World: An exploration of interdisciplinary strategies for sustainable pastoralism

This edited volume summarizes information about the situational context, threats, problems, challenges and solutions for sustainable pastoralism at a global scale. The book has four goals. The first goal is to summarize the information about the history, distribution and patterns of pastoralism, as well as to identify the importance of pastoralism from social, economic and environmental perspectives. The results of an empirical investigation of the environmental and socio-economic implications of pastoralism in representative pastoral regions in the world are also incorporated.

The second goal is to argue that breaking coupled human-natural systems of pastoralism leads to degradation of pastoral ecosystems, as well as to create an analysis framework to assess the vulnerability of worldwide pastoralism. Our analysis framework provides approaches to help comprehensively understand the transitions and the impacts of human-natural systems in the pastoral regions in the world.
