Enforcement of Commercial Arbitral Awards in China overcomes cultural and linguistic barriers by describing and analyzing in a systematic and comprehensive manner the laws and provisions applicable to the enforcement of arbitral awards in China. The title provides a practical evaluation of the quality of the Chinese enforcement system of arbitral awards and its implications on the efficacy of the general arbitration system. It provides extensive summaries of the most relevant case reports and contains thorough citations to Chinese laws and rules, making research in traditionally hard-to-reach materials easier. A chart containing original, Chinese-language titles of laws and rules and appendixes with relevant source materials, such as a list of technical terms with official Chinese translation, enable advanced research.
