What will be the new RCMP commissioner Bob Paulson's legacy to Canada? Deny, Deny, Deny!!! The federal government has filed a statement of defence in one of several sexual harassment lawsuits filed by female officers, denying the allegations and suggesting the courts are not the appropriate venue to air such complaints. The statement was filed earlier this month in a case involving Constable Karen Katz, who launched a lawsuit in January alleging years of harassment and eventually sexual abuse by one of her colleagues when she worked for the RCMP in Vancouver. <http://www.theglobeandmail.com/news/british-columbia/ottawa-issues-denial-in-rcmp-sexual-harassment-lawsuit/article4633426/> The women who have stepped forward to launch sexual harassment lawsuits against the RCMP got a taste of what they're in for this week. The force filed a statement of defence in response to allegations made by Corporal Catherine Galliford, who first went public with her claims last year. Her move prompted other female Mounties, some current, some retired, to come forward with their own stories of on-the-job abuse. If the Mounties go after the female officers alleging harassment in a nasty, no-holds-barred way, it could deter a whole generation of young women from wanting anything to do with the force. And who could blame them?
