Quirky and clumsy twenty-two-year-old Paige Crawford arrives in London on a cold Saturday in January. Just when she starts to think that moving thousands of miles away from home was a bad idea, Jason Frost appears. Confident and classy, Jason is the complete opposite of Paige and just what she needs in her life, or so she thinks. Before their romance has time to blossom, Paige trips and falls into the arms of a mysterious man on a drunken night out. She's snapped by paparazzi, and the next day newspaper headlines suggest she's having an affair with the married footballer. While adjusting to instant tabloid celebrity status, Paige is also juggling a new job at Fashionista magazine, a catalog of dating disasters and a nagging doubt that she maybe won't conquer London after all. When a trip back to Canada for Christmas reminds Paige why she left her old life behind, she returns to London with renewed vigor. While jobs, flats and men may come and go, friends in London are forever.
